Cincinnati-based Leading Education Risk Management Company Celebrates Success on 10th Anniversary

PublicSchoolWORKS helps schools cut costs while focusing on safe learning and working environments

Cincinnati, Ohio – August 17, 2011 – PublicSchoolWORKS, a Cincinnati-based company that offers the one and only comprehensive, fully-automated risk management system available for schools today, is celebrating its 10th anniversary. The company marks 10 years with record customer growth, employee hiring and new product development designed to help schools provide safe learning and working environments to staff and students.

PublicSchoolWORKS was founded by a former school administrator who was determined to create a better and faster way to meet the many safety requirements and regulations placed on schools. The company's two product suites, EmployeeSafe and StudentWatch, automate the safety management process so administrators have more time to focus on the education of students. "Managing all of the safety compliance issues that are required of school districts is incredibly important and incredibly time-consuming," said Tom Strasburger, vice president of PublicSchoolWORKS. "Our systems manage safety training, staff accident reporting, MSDS, student bullying and safety reporting, among other tools, in a web-based environment where requirements such as training for Bullying Prevention and Bloodborne Pathogens happen automatically. The reporting systems available within the programs allow administrators to spot safety issue trends before they become serious."

EmployeeSafe Suite provides online tools for automating the management of employee and building safety in individual schools and districts. It includes more than 250 training courses that educators can take from any computer connected to the Internet.

It offers 24/7 telephone hotlines and online tools for students to report bullying and other safety concerns. Other integrated programs include the student accident and student behavior reporting and management systems.

In addition to focusing on product development and customer support, during the past ten years PublicSchoolWORKS has developed business relationships in support of education. PublicSchoolWORKS is one of the original supporters of the Public School Risk Institute providing the organization with both financial support and in-kind services; a service partner with state School Business Official organizations; serves on the Association of School Business Officials (ASBO) International's Risk Management and Cooperate Members Advisory Committees (CMAC); and has provided services to the Character Council of Greater Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky. In addition, PublicSchoolWORKS partners with insurance companies to provide risk management services to school customers.
