PublicSchoolWORKS' Director of Client Services Wins Two Silver Women in Business Stevie Awards

Cincinnati, OH – December 3, 2013 – Carrie Mockler, PublicSchoolWORKS director of client services, was selected as a 2013 Silver Stevie® Awards for Women in Business winner in two categories: Female Executive of the Year for the Business Services with 11 to 2,500 employees and Woman of the Year – Business Services. Mockler was chosen from more than 1,200 entries because of her proven ability to build a corporate culture of both acting as and working as a service provider. Now in its tenth year, the Stevie® Awards for Women in Business is a prestigious award for women entrepreneurs, executives, employees, and for their organizations.

During her four years at PublicSchoolWORKS, Mockler dramatically increased customer retention to an unprecedented high. Further, Mockler's leadership and implementation of efficiencies has doubled the number of customers a support representative (CSR) serves, while tripling the amount of support and training provided to new customers during the initial set up and implementation of their software program. These unparalleled achievements were made possible because of Mockler's proactive approach and successful ability to redefine the entire client services model.

"Carrie Mockler is one of the most impressive individuals I have ever met," said Steve Temming, president and CEO of PublicSchoolWORKS. "It did not take long to realize that she was the one person who had the potential to transform the client services team to a level congruent with the customer-centric focus and above-and-beyond customer support mentality of the company."

The PublicSchoolWORKS multi-tiered "set it and forget it" systems have been developed to improve safety in schools, while reducing administrator time and effort.
